Trip Preparation Notes

G Adventures Inc. (“G Adventures”) offers Sea Kayaking as an option to add to the Polar program on board the Expedition in the Arctic and Antarctica. This activity requires an extra payment to participate and is designed for experienced sea kayakers who want to challenge themselves in an extreme environment under the close supervision of our qualified guides. As with the general program, our goal is to appreciate pristine wilderness scenery and to encounter unique wildlife in its natural environment.

All outings are guided and supervised by professional guides with experience kayaking in cold-water, near ice and marine mammals. They are certified in advanced wilderness first aid and will be with you at all times to help with new skills or to offer coaching to improve your paddling performance. There will be a Zodiac to assist paddlers if necessary and to help maintain safe boundaries that limit the kayakers range of paddling. The group of kayaks will stay together at all times.

As long as the weather and ice permit it, we hope to optimize the opportunity to offer multiple kayak excursions throughout the voyage. The normal duration of an outing is approximately 2-4 hours with a paddling distance of up to 5 nautical miles. We will not be doing surf landings, though expect to paddle in winds of around 15 km/hr and small choppy seas. Calm conditions are likely to exist in some of the protected bays and fjords we visit, however, paddling conditions may change and it is also normal to encounter winds of up to 20 knots (37 kph) and seas with moderate chop and swell up to 1 meter. Water and air temperatures will both be around 0°C (32°F).

This activity is always dependent on suitable weather, sea and ice conditions and may not take place if it will interfere with other ship operations. We strive to offer kayaking as often as these factors allow, but there are no guarantees.

Kayaking is conducted while the other passengers are doing shore landings or Zodiac cruising.

To participate in the Sea Kayaking program, you must be physically fit and have previous kayaking experience. This is for the safety and enjoyment of yourself and the group. The inherent risks of paddling in the Polar regions can only be managed if everyone participating can be relied upon to react confidently and competently to sudden adverse conditions, as well as to any instructions given by the kayak guides. Your guides are responsible for ensuring that all participants meet the experience and fitness requirements.

Safe Kayaking

Safety is a top priority. The guide to kayaker ratio will always be at least 1:10. In addition, there will be a dedicated safety Zodiac and driver accompanying the sea kayak group. Safety gear is carried in the Zodiac to ensure a speedy recovery in the unlikely event that a kayaker capsizes. You should keep in mind that the Polar regions are some of the most remote and inhospitable environments on Earth, and that sea kayaking is an inherently risky activity. Your guides will give a comprehensive orientation before your first paddle, as well as safety briefings throughout the program. They will also ensure that we adhere to IAATO (International Association for Antarctica Tour Operators) and AECO (Association of Arctic Expedition Cruise Operators) recommended minimum distances from icebergs, glaciers, and wildlife.

What to Bring

We provide all the specialized paddling gear you will need to have a safe and enjoyable time in the polar environment. All our kayaks and gear are top-quality and maintained in excellent condition. We carry enough of all sizes to ensure that everyone feels safe and comfortable in their gear.

You will be outfitted with a Kokatat Supernova paddling suit, spray skirt, paddling-specific PFD, wet shoes, and pogies (kayaking mittens). The rule here is to dress for the water conditions to minimize any risks. Underneath the paddling suit you will need to dress for the conditions. Cloud cover, wind, and precipitation can dramatically affect how it “feels” outside. On a cloudy, breezy day with freezing rain or snow, it can feel brutally cold, but also remember that you will be engaged in strenuous physical activity in a suit that traps air for insulation therefore the possibility of overheating and becoming wet from perspiration must also be considered. The layering principle should be observed, but keep in mind it will not be possible to add or remove layers while on the water inside your paddling suit, however it is advisable to pack extra gear if you can, in case some of it gets wet.

Polypropylene (fleece) and wool are the preferred fibers for paddling. You should avoid cotton as it has poor heat retention when damp (e.g., from perspiration). Your base (regulation) layer should be moisture-wicking thermal long underwear (light-weight for bottoms, medium-weight for top). Your insulating layer should be comfortable non-cotton trousers/pants, and a medium-weight, non-bulky, long sleeve fleece top, preferably without a hood. Your paddling suit will be your waterproof layer. Trapped air inside the suit will act as additional insulation.

A fleece or tight knit wool cap is essential. In addition, a neck tube or balaclava will protect your face and neck against the cold polar winds. A wide-brimmed hat or cap is advisable for UV protection on sunny days. Your feet will be completely dry in the suit. However, if your feet are prone to cold, extra socks are recommended.

The purpose of the neoprene pogies is to provide protection from the elements for your hands without compromising your grip on the paddle shaft. In very cold/windy conditions it is prudent to wear fleece or wool glove liners inside the pogies. You should bring extras of these in case one pair gets wet. Durable dishwashing gloves make good liners that are also waterproof.

Finally, UV protection is essential in Antarctica, even on cloudy days. Bring sunglasses, sunscreen, and lip balm.

Kayaking and Photography

Sea kayaking offers a unique perspective from which to capture incredible photos of the Polar regions and its wildlife. However, there are some caveats that should be kept in mind. Our kayaks do not have truly waterproof compartments so waterproofing your camera is critical. For this reason, compact cameras are more suitable than SLRs when kayaking. Waterproof still or video cameras are ideal.

Otherwise, bring a small dry bag or even a Ziploc bag for your compact camera and you can stow it in your PFD zipper pocket, spray skirt mesh pocket, or in the small deck compartment of the kayak. If you want to use your waterproof camera underwater, you should consider getting a pole attachment that allows you to operate your camera while keeping your hands out of the water. Your hands will not tolerate being submerged in sub-freezing water for more than a few seconds.

Terms and Conditions

The Kayaking Experience

The kayaking program will take place in some of the toughest and most remote environments on Earth. We cannot guarantee any location as it depends on the weather and ice conditions. The description in the Trip Preparation Notes are made with the belief and care that they are accurate, but due to the kayaking program being very much dependent on the natural environment, we cannot guarantee that it will take place as described. If we are unable to provide you with a full kayaking excursion due to a medical emergency, weather and ice conditions, or any circumstance beyond our control, no refund of money paid will be made.

About You

To take part in the program, you must be physically fit and have previous kayaking experience, which includes the ability to paddle a boat efficiently, get in and out of a kayak, use a rudder, perform forward, backward and bracing strokes including a “wet exit”. Passengers DO NOT need to know how to roll a kayak or do a self-rescue. For the safety of yourself and the other kayakers, the kayak guide may for any reason refuse your participation in the program or ask you to undertake a practical test. If we refuse you participation, we shall refund any money you paid to us for the kayaking program but shall not be otherwise liable.

If there are not enough people signed up to share in the kayaking experience, we reserve the right to cancel the program and advise you accordingly. If we do cancel your kayaking program prior to your first excursion, we will refund any monies received from you as payment towards this program but shall not be otherwise liable. We reserve the right for reasons of safety to restrict the number of people participating in our kayaking excursions at any time. Please note that the kayak program cannot be shared between travellers.

Equipment and Safety

To take part in the kayaking program, you must be appropriately dressed. Details of the recommended clothing are listed in the Trip Preparation Notes. You are reminded that in the Polar regions, the weather conditions can change rapidly with little or no warning and it is therefore important that you are adequately dressed for the worst possible conditions. We will provide you with kayak safety vests, a dry suit, and the other items mentioned in the Trip Preparation Notes. Although we regularly maintain and check this equipment before you start kayaking, you must carry out a safety check to ensure that all equipment used by you is in good working order. You must confirm to the Kayak Leader that you have checked your equipment properly and that it is in good condition.

Passengers are also required to wear life preservers at all times. These are NOT the same aids used for Zodiacs; these are flotation devices specifically designed for sea kayaking.

We use 16-foot double (Tandem) Sea Kayak plastic boats that are exceptionally stable and tough, providing a minimum risk of capsize or damage in brash ice. They come complete with spray decks and paddles. We will provide limited emergency gear for the kayaks and in the Zodiac, such as first aid kits, rescue and towlines, as well as spare paddles. Please note no single kayaks are available. For safety, including entering into the kayak and assuming a comfortable paddling position, the maximum weight permitted is 250 lbs or 115 kg per person with a hip width of no more than 40 cm or 15.75 inches. We suggest that you take a horizontal measurement at the widest point of your hips to determine if you will be able to fit in the kayak.

In the interests of your safety and comfort, and that of the other participants, it is very important that you listen to, understand, and comply with any and all instructions given. As instructions will be given in English, it is your responsibility to ensure that you have knowledge of the language so that you are fully able to understand instructions given in English. If you do not understand any of the instructions, we reserve the right to refuse you participation based on safety concerns communicating during an emergency situation.

Your Health

You must declare: (1) when you book this kayaking program and (2) immediately prior to starting your kayaking excursions, any pre-existing medical condition or illness, or poor state of health. You should, before starting your excursion, visit a doctor for a personal medical examination to ensure that you are fully able to participate in the kayaking program, and we shall assume that you have done so. If you are recovering from any breathing illness or the effects of alcohol and/or drug consumption or have recently had any major illness or surgery, then by participating in the kayaking program, you may be placing yourself and others at risk. If so, we would strongly advise you not to take part.

Liability Waiver Form

As you will be sea kayaking in cold and icy conditions, there will be the constant risk of personal injury. You must accept that element of risk. You will be required to have medical and travel insurance and to sign a separate Liability Waiver Form Release expressly assuming the risks associated with the kayaking program and releases. G Adventures Inc., (and all other related, affiliated, associated or otherwise connected corporations, partnerships, individuals and other entities and all of their respective officers, directors, employees, contractors, agents, successors and assigned, from all liability (including but not limited to injury, loss or death) and waiving all claims. You will not be permitted to participate in the kayaking program unless you execute this form.

Kayaking is restricted to those persons aged 18 years and over.

Please note the Liability Waiver Form will be completed on board the ship prior to your first kayak outing.
